

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

Q²
5 A signal processing circuit outputs an output signal corresponding to a pulse width of an input pulse signal. This signal processing circuit comprises means for accumulating pulse widths of the input pulse signal for a predetermined period of time, and means for outputting the output signal corresponding to the accumulated pulse width. Each of these pulse widths has one of positive and negative polarities.